

The Greener London That You've Got To See

London is often visited for its vibrant entertainment and for being a busy financial district. But London is more than just an entertaining and financial district; it is also the perfect place to head onto to get close to nature. London has a wide array of nature rich gardens and parks.

These gardens and parks in London are perfect spots to enjoy the unspoiled beauty of nature and to spend some solitary moments. Here is a list of must-visit parks and gardens in London:

Kew Gardens

The Kew Gardens is a World Heritage Site. It contains the largest collection of plants including giant water lilies, rhododendron bell, exotic palms and more. Tourists can marvel at the different plant species at the Kew Gardens. Also on view at the Kew Gardens is the Kew Palace.

London Wetland Centre

The London Wetland Centre is perfect for romantic and explorative escapades. The wetland animals that can be viewed at the centre include kingfishers, woodpeckers, ducks, goldfinches and more. The London Wetland Centre is open all year round for tourists. You can see various bird and wildlife species during different seasons.

Regent's Park

The Regent's Park was once a royal hunting ground. Now it serves as a popular nature's attraction in London. It displays magnificently landscaped gardens, wetland, woodland and even a rose garden. The design of the garden is credited to John Nash, a well known designer in England. For the early tourists, this park is the place to head onto. It opens as early as 5.00 am all year round.

Hyde Park

The Hyde Park is one of the largest green parks in London. It is the home of the world renowned Diana Memorial Fountain. Aside from being a natural attraction, the Hyde Park has also been a historically and politically known spot in London. It is the favourite location for mass demonstrations and protests. Throughout its existence, the Hyde Park has already witnessed several protests. This 142 hectares of land is also perfect for guided walks.

London is indeed a rich city. It is not only rich financially and materially but it also rich in nature. Its parks and gardens are testimonies of London's reverence to nature. It has preserved the greens that now serve as tourist attractions. London's parks and gardens are perfect for tourists who enjoy the beauty of nature and it is even perfect for those who just need a relaxing walk.

About the Author

Clink Hostel is a fully restored historical courthouse. It is 200 years old and holds historical relevance to London. Today, Clink Hostel serves as a unique, cheap and comfortable backpackers' hostel in London. It is located close to most of London's attractions. It is a Cheap Hostel London perfect for tourists who wish to explore the best of London on a budget.

Source: <http://www.inquireinto.com>